

Arctic Circle Winter Air Adventure®
IMPORTANT INFORMATION

CERTIFICATES

Please provide the reservationist with the correctly spelled first and last names of each person in the tour party. Each name provided will appear on an official Arctic Circle Air Adventure® certificate.

FLIGHT WEIGHT

Please provide the reservationist with the individual weight of each member of the tour party. The weight is required for proper balance of aircraft used for the flight portion of the tour.

WEIGHT LIMIT: Baggage is limited to 5-10 pounds per person. Guests with luggage over 10 may be asked to leave items in storage.

WHAT TO WEAR

Dress for comfort, not to impress. Minimal time is spent outside on this adventure; however, we do suggest you dress for arctic conditions in case an emergency does take place. Bring warm winter weight boots, winter jacket, cap, scarf, and gloves or mittens. It is advisable to have outer layers that provide some measure of wind resistance. Other recommended layers include long underwear, warm socks, and warm pants. Wool, fleece, pile, and synthetic fabrics are also recommended.

TOUR VEHICLES

Northern Alaska Tour Company strives to provide a personalized touring experience. The flight portion of the tour is typically conducted in 9-passenger aircraft. Ground-touring is done in small groups utilizing a 15-passenger van.

SMOKING

The interiors of the tour vehicles are maintained as smoke-free environments. There are opportunities to smoke outside the vehicles throughout the tour.

RESTROOMS

Restrooms are available at the departure terminal. Once on tour, there are restrooms available at Coldfoot Camp approximately 2 hours after departure. There are no facilities on the plane.

GUIDES

Northern Alaska Tour Company guides are highly-trained Alaskans who are able to share their unique understanding of Alaska with you based on their personal experiences. We are confident that you will find the level of service provided by your guide to be as high or higher than you have experienced before.

GUEST SAFETY

Guest safety always takes precedence over convenience. Weather in Alaska's Arctic can and does affect flying conditions. Weather conditions always dictate safe flight altitude. At times it is necessary to fly above cloud cover, thus reducing or even eliminating aerial visibility. Ground tour vehicles are CB radio equipped.

ALTERATION

Due to rapidly changing weather conditions in Alaska's Arctic, it is not unusual for flight departure times to be delayed from 15 minutes to over an hour. Guest safety is our foremost priority and potential delays are simply an unavoidable aspect of flying in Alaska's Arctic. On rare occasions, weather or other uncontrollable circumstances may require alteration/cancellation of a portion or all of the scheduled tour itinerary.

GRATUITIES

Gratuities Policy: As with other service industries, tips are not required but are used to reward guides for a job well done. Standard tip amounts for this tour range from $5.00 to $10.00+ per guest for excellent service. A good range for pilot tips is $10.00-$20.00 per guest.

SAFETY IN THE WILDERNESS

It is important that travelers with Northern Alaska Tour Company understand that Alaska's Arctic is a truly remote wilderness region. Traveling through vast wilderness stretches requires adequate time and preparation. Weather or mechanical factors, albeit infrequent, can result in multi-hour delays. Medical facilities are limited. Limited communication and transportation infrastructure inherently cause evacuation for illness or other emergency situations to take, at the very best, several hours to conduct. For this reason, travelers to this region should be of reasonable health and physical condition.

Northern Alaska Tour Company is an Alaskan-owned tour operator based in Fairbanks, Alaska.

The company was founded in 1987 to provide unparalleled travel and touring experiences in Alaska's Arctic for guests while maintaining the highest standards of safety and commitment to traditional culture and the environment.

Our cooperative, grassroots tour programs strengthen the local economies in the communities and regions we visit and help preserve the wisdom of knowledgeable locals by recording and incorporating their knowledge into tour programs.

As our traveling guests learn of and experience firsthand the delicate, wondrous environment of Alaska's Arctic, they are able to appreciate and help protect it. When carried forth conscientiously, travel and touring can serve to protect the natural environment and preserve traditional culture where it might otherwise be destroyed.

In sharing our culture and environment with visitors, we as hosts, along with our guests are deeply enriched by the experience.....which is really what travel and touring is all about.
